

Kentucky Agritourism Handbook

What is agritourism?

Agritourism is defined as “The act of visiting a working farm or any agricultural, horticultural, or agribusiness operations for the purpose of enjoyment, education or active involvement in the activities of the farm or operation.”

Why is agritourism important to Kentucky farmers?

As Kentucky tobacco farmers move forward in the post-tobacco quota buyout economy, many aspects of the agricultural landscape have changed. No longer is there a guaranteed market for the producer who raised tobacco. Many tobacco producers in Kentucky have either quit raising tobacco or greatly reduced the amount they raise. These producers are looking for ways to make up for that lost tobacco income. Agritourism venues and events can provide additional income to farmers and the rural communities that they live in. Agritourism is not a replacement for tobacco, but it can be a means of earning supplemental income that can help preserve and sustain family farms. Agritourism is one way to add value to existing agricultural assets such as crops, livestock, and the natural resources that the farm has to offer.

Why is agritourism important to local tourism?

Agritourism offers an opportunity to build relationships between the agricultural community and the local tourism industry by incorporating tour groups, educating school children, and hosting civic events. This increases rural economic development dollars in the venue’s community. The ultimate goal of an agritourism venue is to increase net farm income by filling customer needs for education and recreation on the farm.

Why is agritourism important to all Kentucky citizens?

Today most Kentuckians have no direct connection to farm life, even in rural areas. Agritourism gives people the chance to better understand the skill and hard work that go into producing the food and fiber we all enjoy. It’s also a chance for great food and clean country fun at destinations that are close to home.

Getting Started

Welcome to the Kentucky Agritourism Handbook

The purpose of this handbook is to assist you with starting your own agritourism business. The handbook is divided into seven different resource groups:

1. Business Development Resources

If you are unsure of where to start, the Business Development Resources page is where you should go. This page outlines resources that cover all the different parts of putting together a business plan, developing your business, and maintaining it. You can use resources from the other pages to build a stronger and better business plan.

2. Financial Resources and Grants

This page can give you an idea of some of the financial resources and options available for agritourism.

3. Marketing Resources

Marketing and promoting your business is an important part of developing your agritourism attraction. Learn about different marketing strategies as well as different promotional programs such as the Kentucky Proud program.

4. Health and Safety

Part of working with the general public is knowing how to do it safely for you, your business, and the participants. Learn about general guidelines for health and safety.

5. Laws and Regulations

To run your business successfully you must comply with local, state, and federal laws and administrative regulations. It is important to know your legal responsibilities.

6. Educational Opportunities

Learn about educational opportunities across the state for you and your employees to create a stronger, better business.

7. Associations and Groups

Get involved in other organizations that pertain to your agricultural productions and agritourism enterprise.

1. Business Development Resources

Any new business venture can be overwhelming. The best place to start is with writing a business plan.

There are three basic parts to developing a business: creating the business plan, completing the business plan, and maintaining and improving the business.

A cohesive, detailed business plan provides a solid foundation on which to build. Basic sections of a business plan can include the proposal outline, timelines, management overviews, financial management plan, and marketing strategies. The business plan should answer the questions:

- What do you want to do?
- How do you want to manage it?
- What requirements are needed?
- How will you pay for it?
- How will you make it successful?

Each basic section is vital in the overall process. It is important to be very thorough with your business plan and research. The proposal should be a detailed illustration of exactly what you would like to do.

Throughout the entire process you should establish deadlines in order to keep yourself on track and turn your dream into reality. Therefore, creating a timeline can help you stay on track and outline the order by which you need to complete tasks.

Management overviews can help you with thinking long term. Properly managing a business requires dedication and analysis. For some new business ventures you may have to hire new employees or seasonal workers, buy new equipment that may require special licenses or operators, or rethink existing business structures. This will also help you with your financial management plan. A well-laid-out financial plan can help you acquire grants, loans, or other resources to offset costs.

Finally, creating and establishing a marketing strategy can help ensure a successful business. Proper promotion can increase profits and awareness.

Listed below are resources that can help with every aspect of the business development process, including additional information on writing a business plan.

Concept: The program provides education opportunities for first time farmers. Through KYFarmStart farmers can learn management, marketing, farm safety, and production. The primary goal is to assist producers in developing a complete business plan in order for them to succeed.

2. Financial Resources and Grants

One of the biggest challenges with transitioning into an agritourism attraction can be funding. Many different loans and grants exist across the state for agritourism and agricultural education. Financial assistance can come from organizations, banks, or universities.

The financial statement overview of your business outline can play a crucial role in acquiring financial assistance. A well-thought-out and thorough financial overview should illustrate exact or anticipated costs and profits of your agritourism attraction. Financial sources are more willing to assist you when they can see exactly what you would like to do, how much it will cost, where the money will go, and how it will benefit the community.

The financial overview section can also help you assess the financial feasibility of becoming an agritourism attraction. This page outlines some of the different resources available. Established agritourism attractions can also investigate these sources.

3. Marketing Resources

Good marketing is key to a successful business. Even well-established businesses continually evolve their marketing strategies to meet changing consumer tastes.

Through marketing, you can establish a reputation, set your business apart, and draw people to your attraction.

Several different strategies, and paid and unpaid media channels, exist to market your business through broadcast and print advertisements, websites, social media pages, and billboard or roadside signage.

Several different programs across the state can assist with marketing your attraction and products.

4. Health and Safety Resources

As the owner/manager/facilitator of an agricultural tourist attraction, it is your job to provide the healthiest and safest environment for both your agriculture practices and the individual participants.

Before entering into any new business venture you should research all health and safety guidelines and laws.

Compliance with all regulations is extremely important because it limits your liability for accidents that may harm visitors, employees, or farm animals, or damage property.

Prevention is the key to avoiding lawsuits or actions by authorities that can shut down your operation. The Kentucky Department of Agriculture can provide you with signs that summarize current liability law for your visitors.

The following resources can assist you with research on guidelines and laws. Be aware more health and safety guidelines apply than can be listed here. And, due to the individual situation of your Kentucky agritourism attraction, you may have to do further specific research.

5. Laws and Regulations

Along with health and safety guidelines, it's important to know the laws and regulations related to your agritourism enterprise. The Kentucky Chamber of Commerce can assist you with learning the laws and regulations.

Compliance with all regulations is extremely important because it limits your liability for accidents that may harm visitors, employees, or farm animals, or damage property.

Prevention is key to avoiding lawsuits or actions by authorities that can shut down your operation. Knowing the laws that apply to your business can help you better understand your legal responsibilities.

The following resources can assist you with this research. Resources on this subject are not limited to those on this page. Due to the individual nature of Kentucky agritourism attractions, you may need to do additional research. Nothing in this section, or anywhere else in this handbook, may be construed to constitute legal advice.
